Five Little Maries
Mrs. Roosevelt Will Debate
Acute Spy Mania
How Long Will It Last?

THE DIONNE quintuplets, all girls, have been christened, in their private hospital, and every one is named Marie, in honor of the Virgin. Each little girl has two names in addition to the name "Dionne." "Marie" appears in all the names.

Mother and father are French Canadian Catholics, and their five daughters, in addition to being named Marie, will, perhaps, as often happens in France, be called as Marie de la France, which means that also in honor of the Virgin Mary, they will wear only white and thus for the first years of their life.

Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt's friend, Mrs. O'Day, is a candidate for representative-at-large in New York State, and Mrs. Roosevelt has made speeches to help her friend.

Mrs. O'Day's opponent, Miss Brooks, says the President's wife has no right to take part in a congressional campaign and demands a debate on the subject, to which demand Mrs. Roosevelt, good naturedly, consents.

However, the committee in charge of the affair at which the debate was to have taken place, says there is "no room" for it on the program.

It does not seem to the average citizen that such debating is called for; in fact, nothing beyond this statement by Mrs. Roosevelt:

"As a free American woman, I think I have a right to say what I think, including the right to tell my fellow citizens, as many as care to hear me, that I believe Mrs. O'Day would make an excellent representative-at-large, and hope she will be elected."

Marriage has enough disadvantages, for women, without the additional disadvantage of forbidding a married woman to express her opinions on politics.

The "spy mania" in Europe is almost as acute as it is in the big war. A special court for spies in Germany has sentenced a number to death and imprisoned many others for fifteen years each.

This spy excitement is important to all European countries because it is the sort of excitement that precedes war. An even more dangerous sign is the determination of the League of Nations to send troops into the Saar for the coming elections to forestall any violent action by the Nazis.

Three individuals in and around New York each won $100,000 yesterday in the lottery. They were a hard-middled worker, a boy of nineteen, and a woman, all poor. For a little while they will be rich. How long will they be rich?

Statisticians show that when a woman inherits money and can dispose of it as she pleases, it usually takes her a year or two for her mind to get away from her by dishonest scheming or foolish honest advice.

How long will the hard work of the woman and the boy keep their $150,000?

How many millions will the lottery tickets money that could be made useful in the regular course of life, forgetful that those who buy tickets put into the lottery a great many more millions than they take out?

INSULTS SOPS LIFE STORY STAND

Geagan, Girl Seized in $12,811 Pay Holdup; $1790 Recovered

By Associated Press
Chicago, Nov. 1.—Tears flowed Samuel Insull's story to the jury trying him for mail fraud today as the Chicago utility executive recalled kindnesses he received in his youth from Thomas A. Edison, great American inventor, and Edison's wife.

Insull, appearing as the first witness in his own defense against charges of stock swindling, prefaced his testimony with the familiar story of his success.

Settling down in the witness stand, Insull began a slow autobiography, beginning with his boyhood in London and leading up to his rise in American business.

A capacity crowd had formed an hour before the doors of Federal Judge John J. Walker's courtroom were opened. It was charged with excitement as Insull walked to the front.

Insull's attorney, Floyd E. Thompson, began the defense session by calling Insull to the stand a few minutes after 10 o'clock. Insull, dressed in a blue business suit with a white handkerchief showing in the breast pocket, turned his left to face the jury, crossed his legs and began.

"Where are you from?" he was asked.

"I'm living at the Seneca Hotel," said Insull, in the queries provided by my son, Samuel Insull, Jr.

"Tell the jury about your early home life."

SACRAMENTS BARRED IN MEXICO

By International News Service
Mexico City, Nov. 1.—Catholic Mexico's excitement over the government's swiftly-moving drive to suppress clericalism reached fever heat today when drastic steps against the church were taken in two more states.

A hard and fast ban has been placed on all Catholic sacraments, marriages, baptisms, and other sacraments were also taken in the state of Tamaulipas. Several other states had already expelled priests and taken over the churches.

Charging the prelate with sedition, Governor Jose Miralles Pineda of the state of Puebla issued a decree expelling Mr. Nicolas Coronas, bishop of Puebla.

Catholics, who form the majority of the population, are crowding to those churches that are still open, hastening marriages, baptisms, confirmations, and other sacraments that they fear may have to be received in illegal secrecy later.

In line with the government's policy, holding that bishops in Mexico are not Mexican citizens, Mexico's first allegiance is to the Holy See, a congressional commission today formally charged Archbishop Pedro Yraola of Puebla with allegiance to the papacy and to the Holy See.

TROOPS WAIT ON SAAR LINE FOR ORDERS

By International News Service
Berlin, Nov. 1.—The Saar territory today took a place in the first rank of war tinder boxes with receipt in Berlin of news that the French government had ordered troops to re-enter the Saar at the call of Geoffrey Knox, League of Nations high commissioner for the rich industrial region.

Garrisons at Nancy, Metz and other vital points along the French frontier have been ordered by Paris to hold themselves ready for instant service.

Two and a half months before the January elections to make the Saarlanders decide whether to return to Germany, the French military order has tightened tension.

France accuses Germany of preparing a "putsch." German refuses France of preparing to make the "putsch" impossible.

In circles close to the German government it was believed today that France is determined to move troops into the Saar to block the plebiscite. Chancellor Hitler insists he wishes to avoid any difficulty with France.

Charging danger in the present situation is that Germany has been ordered today to refrain from overhauling for relations with Germany and all plans for national activity in 1935 take into account the presence of the Saar within the Reich. German officials feared up, even at the possibility of postponing the plebiscite.

Fear of New War With Germany Grips France

By Associated Press
Paris, Nov. 1.—A war scare overshadowed the visits of French people today to the Saar territory.

At almost the same time John Starn, 18, of 3 K street, South Boston, discovered too late to stop his automobile that the L street drawbridge was open, its gates closed. Unable to stop, he crashed into the automobile, and sending it hurtling to the hospital with internal injuries, continued on his right hand and elbow.

CARDINAL RACK, FEARS CRISIS

New York, Nov. 1.—Pope Pius XI, shocked by news of the assassination in France of King Alexander of Yugoslavia, "prayed to God that the equilibrium of Europe be maintained in the crisis," it was reported.

Returning from Europe aboard the Salaria, Cardinal O'Connell, archbishop of Boston, who was with the Pope at the time, said: "The Holy Father was very upset. The Pope prayed to God that nothing would occur in Europe to make conditions more precarious as a result of the King's assassination."

This assassination appeared to be a cold and unprovoked attack, as the Pope appears smooth, peaceable by no means a sentimentalist at heart.

Asked Premier Mussolini's views, the Cardinal replied: "At heart he is for peace. He has no desire to see Europe really worse war. So he is."

AUTO DEATHS AROUSE CURLEY

By FRANK REILLY
Dreadful steps to reduce the number of persons killed and maimed by automobiles on state highways were taken today by Mayor M. Curley during his first week in office as governor.

Curley revealed today that he has announced today.

In addition to curbing the evil of reckless motorists, Curley, when elected to that office in November, will order the construction of police sidewalks along every Massachusetts highway in order that pedestrians may be afforded safety while speeding.

His work in this direction will serve a dual purpose. It will add to making the highways safe for pedestrians, projects calling for construction of such sidewalks will provide temporary employment for the unemployed, and give work to the granite cutters of Quincy, Milford and Rockport.

Curley revealed today that he also has under consideration plans for a major highway project.

Child Starts Busy Day in Cold Rainy Dawn

It was dark and rain fell drearily at 5:30 a. m. today, but that meant nothing to little Catherine O'Malley, two and a half years old, who was playing at a hydrant in Beacon street, Somerville.

New Robert O'Donnell of Waterbury has seen many peculiar sights on the street between midnight and the coming of dawn, but she was having fun climbing a hydrant a policeman started to take her home.

There being nothing else to do, O'Donnell tried to question the youngster as she paused in attempt.

DEATH MISSES 2 BY INCHES

Watery graves were almost the fate of two motorists who figured in drawbridge accident, one in Charlestown and the other in South Boston, today.

Salvatore D. Rywost, 38 Fulton street, Medford, came within an inch of death today when his automobile skidded on Charlestown Bridge.

At almost the same time John Starn, 18, of 3 K street, South Boston, discovered too late to stop his automobile that the L street drawbridge was open, its gates closed. Unable to stop, he crashed into the automobile, and sending it hurtling to the hospital with internal injuries, continued on his right hand and elbow.

HEBERT CHARGES PLOT TO TAKE LAZARUS FROM SENATE SEAT

OPPOSER IN FOR SENATE SEAT IS SCORED

Providence, Nov. 1.—Plotting to trade away the American lace industry in Rhode Island was charged against the Roosevelt administration by U. S. Senator Felix Hebert of Rhode Island in a speech delivered here, in Central Falls and in Abingdon.

Hebert's Democratic opponent, former Senator Peter G. Gerry, to Washington would mean, it was said by Hebert, that this plan of the administration would be furthered by Gerry, who has "constantly voted against the interest of Rhode Island industry."

Senator Hebert struck directly at his opponent when he charged him with lack of understanding of the important political questions and called him for his "ignorance of the unemployment insurance question." The senator said:

"My opponent in this campaign has called attention to the fact that while I favor unemployment insurance I will not favor such a measure as may be advocated by the President of the United States."

Hebert said that he had been told that the measure would be advocated by the President of the United States.

ANDERSON JURY INDICTMENTS TO STAND

All indictments returned by the federal grand jury which was headed by George J. Anderson of Plymouth, now under arrest for alleged acceptance of a bribe, will stand, it was declared today by United States Attorney Francis J. W. Ford.

Information in cases which were in process of presentation will be given to the new grand jury, Ford said. One investigation involves a $100,000 stock fraud case conducted through the mails and under probe for two and a half years, he revealed.

One case had already been thus challenged because Anderson is under arrest for bribery, and the statement of Judge Ira L. Letts during this case was taken in point how the government would move.

Judge Letts told counsel for Edward Jenks of Roxbury, indicted for attempted extortion, that Jenks could plead guilty to the bid indictment or not, but if he pleaded not guilty, the court added, the new grand jury would be asked to move for another indictment.

As it turned out, when Jenks pleaded guilty, the first challenge was not at all, but it did indicate which way the government would move, according to attorneys who had come to court to see Jenks' plea.

Jenks' plea, which was to a charge of attempting to extort $1500 from Elbert A. Harvey of Chestnut Hill, treasurer of Mt. Holyoke College, according to the government, Jenks sent a note to Harvey, saying:

"If you want someone you love killed, you tell anyone."

Jenks had formerly worked for Harvey as a butler. He was given five years in the federal penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa., William F. Scrimgeour, alias of Roxbury, who was indicted for aiding and abetting Jenks, was exonerated by Jenks and the government not proved.

Meanwhile Anderson was still in the Cambridge jail in default of $20,000 bail.

The new grand jury, summoned when Judge Hugh McLean dismissed the body which had Anderson as foreman, was stilling today.

Turning again to Gerry, the Senator said he had repeatedly called attention to Gerry's "lack of understanding, not only of the issues of this campaign but of the fundamental principles of our government and of the questions that affect the interests of our people generally."

Harvard 'Bolt' Is Scored

The report that 10 members of the Harvard faculty had bolted the Democratic party to support Governor G. C. Bates against former Mayor James M. Curley in the gubernatorial race was branded today by Professor Francis J. The College of Boston College Law School as part of "a campaign of distortion."

"They sent out word that 10 Harvard professors who were Democrats are going to vote for the Republican candidate. Actually only one of them are real Democrats, two do not care much about the party to support for any, two names are not on the list, one became a Democrat on a recent supplementary list and one registered only five days ago at a Democrat, probably for the purpose of this story."

FORD PLANNING MILLION CARS

By International News Service, Detroit, Nov. 1.—The Ford Motor Co. is "out of the depression" and will build 1,000,000 cars in 1935, marking the first time since 1930 that production has been set at a million units, officials announced today.

"Make it 1,000,000 or better," Henry Ford commented on the announcement, "but we are not going to let the depression during the last six months, and what we see in the future, this is a year of improved business ahead."

Asked whether 1935 will "end the depression," Ford replied: "Why, the depression would be over for the whole country very soon, if American industrialists would just forget the alphabet schemes and take hold of their industries and run them with good, sound American business sense."

"They should take hold of the country, too, in the same way, and run it with good, sound, American common sense and common sense."

The announcement today of Ford's 1935 production plan comes two months after Ford stated he was spending more than $18,000,000 in the construction of a new plant at Dearborn "to show confidence in President Roosevelt."

GODINA VANDERBILT ORDEAL; FIGHTS ON AT TRIAL

By Associated Press, New York, Nov. 1.—Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, still pained by a weak from six hours as the witness stand yesterday, returned to the supreme court today to continue her testimony in her fight for custody of her 13-year-old daughter, Gloria, Laura Morgan Vanderbilt.

As she entered the courtroom, she was supported by Mrs. Harry Hays Morgan, wife of her brother, and by James A. Murray, a personal friend and associate counsel.

In the hearing, which began Oct. 1, before Justice John F. Carey, is expected to be concluded late tomorrow. Mrs. Vanderbilt, the widow of Reginald C. Vanderbilt, took the stand for the first time Tuesday afternoon after charges made by her sister-in-law, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, who now has custody of the child, and Mrs. Whitney's attorney.

The charges were that Mrs. Vanderbilt is not a fit parent.

Harry Hays Morgan, Mrs. Vanderbilt's brother, and Prince Gottfried of Hohenzollern, Landau, once her fiancé, were at the door of the courtroom when Mrs. Vanderbilt arrived. The prince bowed and kissed her white-gloved hand and her brother-in-law drew her solemn face.

She was escorted into the courtroom by her sister, Lady Furze, and by her brother-in-law, her nurse, her personal maid and her attorneys.

He was followed by Cardinal Hume and the surrounding country, but he has seen to it that his countrymen have received the fruits of the war. He is, in his view, a mechanical genius."

HITLER'S MISTAKE

The Cardinal was questioned about the Hitler regime in Germany. "I shall not discuss people by name. It is a tremendous mistake to persecute any people because of race or religion."

He would not discuss the New Deal, but did remark: "I believe he is trying to do the best thing he can do."

The Cardinal spent two weeks at the American College in Rome and at the Pope's villa outside the city.

A number of prelates accompanying him, he left immediately for Boston.

WOMAN CLAIMS RAID CASH

For hours today, Winthrop police and federal agents puzzled over $1,700 wrapped in a paper bag, and over two men and a woman in a house they raided in Neponset avenue in that town.

As a matter of fact, they were still puzzled over the money after the woman claimed it and declined to explain its presence in the house. The raid was staged on a tip to federal agents that narcotics were being peddled from the house. After hours of questioning, following the raid, the failed to produce narcotics, Police Chief William Humphreys announced he expected to release the man shortly.

Mrs. Colla Berkowicz, occupant of the house, told police one of the men came there two months ago and offered to do some painting in return for room rent. The other man appeared three days ago, she said.

Both men told police they came here from New York, although one gave a Dorchester address as his home.

ple to the graves of their military and civil dead in Alsace and Lorraine.

Battle sounds of 20 years ago were recalled as fear of another invasion by Germany was aroused by official and private warnings.

The strength of Hitler's army, said one newspaper, will be greater next spring than the one with which Germany defeated the World War.

Preparations for defense increased the nation's dread of an air invasion, with its possible campaign of bombs, gas and microbes.

The warning of Marshal Henri Pétain, minister of war, that "Germany is ready," made the French government's committee of the Chamber of Deputies at a secret session Monday, was followed by the newspaper Matin's claim that the German army already is greater than that of France and has more than 1,000,000 men, with the full backing of tanks, artillery and aerial force, ready to march next spring.

Pétain in June gave similar figures, but the war years then did quickly in the face of political opposition charges that the military party was "beating the drum" to get appropriations and unity the nation in the midst of internal dissension and economic distress.

A warning to the people that the government is hiding the truth of the "German danger" was published recently by Raymond Redouty, a critic of the late Marshal Pétain.

Three days later Pétain asked an emergency appropriation of $200,000,000 outside the budget and he and newspapers gave figures designed to make the "German danger" more real.

TROOPS READY TO GO

French preparations to send troops into the Saar territory if the League of Nations governing commission asks help, centered attention on the disputed region, where violence might be the starting point of another war, often publicized here to be "inevitable."

French governments for 15 years have been warring over confidence France would be able to defeat the Germans, but for the past year reports of German rearmament have been heard, and the French have hastened on the formidable 135-mile fortifications along the border.

The air force was reorganized with the weakness was demonstrated by maneuvers which showed that the army was at the mercy of invaders.

Hitler Bans Any Move in Saar to Start War

By International News Service

BERLIN, Nov. 1.—Adolf Hitler, German chancellor, has issued a decree forbidding any move in the Saar territory which might lead to a start of a new war.

Again he has become a potential power in Europe, and his decree is reflecting German rearmament and the fact that the German army is now a more powerful force than it was in 1918.

Instilling upon avoiding any possible conflict with France over the Saar, Hitler has ordered the German Front, the Nazi organization in the Saar, to summarize disavow any member who deliberately acts against Hitler's policy.

London, Nov. 1.—Presiding over the League of Nations conference on the Saar, Hitler has ordered the German Front, the Nazi organization in the Saar, to summarize disavow any member who deliberately acts against Hitler's policy.

A. & P. GUESTS SIDE OF FIGHT IN CLEVELAND

Officials of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Company today gave their version of the labor controversy which has resulted in the closing of all the company stores in Cleveland.

The announcement read: "The company wants to make it clear as the matter that the difficulty was not between the A. & P. and its employees. Its employees were not discontented.

The trouble arose after the Cleveland Federation of Labor had failed to organize Cleveland A. & P. managers and clerks. As far as A. & P. knew, only a very few of its store employees had shown any interest in the union. Nevertheless, numerous Cleveland unions, none of whom represented A. & P. employees, picketed A. & P. warehouses and prevented deliveries to stores.

"The only demand made on A. & P. came after the picketing began. Union leaders then demanded A. & P. to unite the employees in Cleveland 100 per cent. In view of the small number who had shown interest in the union, A. & P. refused to make an active part in the movement. Its stores were a result of the A. & P. managers and clerks in Cleveland. It was said the Federation had made it to interest only 40 men.

NO POLICE PROTECTION

Efforts to maintain business operations in the face of the picketing led to violence because the stores did not obtain the necessary protection from the city.

More than a week of continuous protests to various local officials of the company decided to abandon its Cleveland business in order to prevent further violence.

Over a hundred A. & P. former Cleveland employees held a meeting in Cleveland last night. Mayor Davis, reading: "We, the undersigned, being members of the store operated by the Great Atlantic & Pacific Company in Greater Cleveland, hereby protest to the public with his picketing the company which has resulted in the closing of all the company stores.

"We never at any time have had any trouble with our employees, and there has been no violence or any other kind of trouble. We are a part of the company as a collective bargaining; and we feel that an injustice has been done to the company and to ourselves, and we are closing our stores.

"We stand ready to serve the public and we have done so for many years. We are not the cause of the closing of the stores, and we are not the cause of the violence. We are a part of the company as a collective bargaining; and we feel that an injustice has been done to the company and to ourselves, and we are closing our stores.

Jockey Wins Contest on Courage

Magner Tells of Daring Death on Track

Plymouth Woman Takes Second Prize; Sexes Divide Honors

The jury's list, the judge is on the bench, and here is the verdict you've been waiting for—the decision in the Boston Evening American's letter writing contest to determine which are the more courageous, men or women.

And it's a draw!

The first prize of $100 was won by a man—JOCKEY WILLIAM MAGNER of 37 Harvard street, Medford—for his vivid description of a man's act of bravery. However, the judge was frank to admit that the contest proved that courage was a matter that transcended sex—that it was found as often in a woman as in a man.

The fact that finally decided their opinions in favor of the Magner letter was his brilliant eye-witnessed description of a thrilling and outstanding feat of courage.

With a broader issue of which sex displays the greater courage, the contestants were almost evenly divided, and so were the prize winners. The judge agreed with one of the letter writers that "courage and unselfishness—they go hand in hand in all brave humans, regardless of sex."

WILLIAM MAGNER His Tale of Courage Wins

Woman's Courage in Rome

The second prize of $50 was awarded to MRS. E. R. ROBBINS of 80 Summer street, Plymouth, who, wrote on behalf of her own sex, but she described a type of courage far different in its outward appearance, at least—from the thrilling feat described by Magner.

The simple brevity of her letter, too, made it a serious contender for first honors. It was a delightful task that the judges faced in making the final decision between the two.

Ten prizes of $1 each are awarded to the following:

Mr. M. Smith, 87 Tremont street; D. F. Cunningham, 54 S. Main street; South Boston; Mrs. Margaret Ade Sweeney, 3 Walnut court, Roxbury; Mrs. Paula Long, Framingham; William H. Vail, 100 North Main street, Boston; Ethel T. Shiley, Milton, N. H.; U. S. Sandwick, 100 North Main street, Boston; Mrs. G. E. Lewis, 233 Park Drive, Back Bay; and Alexander B. Vail, 100 North Main street, Boston.

Jockey Magner went to his own race track experience to find the sample of courage won the contest. Let him tell his own story.

During the running of a race at the fair grounds in New Orleans, in the month of May, Jockey Magner performed a most skillful and courageous feat that not only thrilled the crowd of race-goers, but probably saved the life of the late Jockey Magner. In the presence of mind to reach over and grasp James from a falling horse.

"O'Malley performed the spectacular and fearless feat of holding James in his one hand while he held the other horse in the first and second positions made the act a most dangerous one as any fall or accident with front-running horses invariably results in injury to the rider.

He must certainly risked his own life to save that of his fellow-jockey; a combination of presence of mind, skill and courage."

A Brave Woman

And now for Mrs. Robbins' letter.

"The word courage brings to me a vision of a woman I knew, who lived the word to the letter. I yet know that she had an incurable cancer, and that she was a woman, who is able to do only the lightest of work, and has absolutely nothing to depend on or to look forward to, but suffering."

BARBARA STANWYK GUEST ARTIST ROLE WITH RUDY

That "croonin'" chaplain from Maine, Rudy Vallee, certainly presents some popular guest stars on his Variety Hour. All of which broadcast greets car-cuppers every Thursday evening from 8 to 9 p. m. over WEBC's air channels. Tonight he is bringing Barbara Stanwyk to the microphone.

Barbara, as we all know, is that gorgeous red-headed movie star who is married to Frank Fay. She will re-enact a short play with a special play for the occasion by her husband. Assisting her will be Gale Gordon, leading man of Mary Pickford's stock company.

In addition to the above-mentioned personalities, the other entertainment will consist of Ann Brock, veteran "radio" actress, Donald Stuart, radio star of the Pacific Coast, Winifred Shaw, music songstress, and that funny fellow, Lou Holtz, who seems to have acquired a permanent comic role in the show.

Anita Louise, seventeen-year-old Wampus Baby star who has made quite an impression on the minds of the public in her recent picture, will be guest star on the night (WNAC) presentation of "The Merry Widow" which is to be aired from 10:30 to 10:45. Anita will be on the air during the evening and of an interview by Ch. Two.

A preview of "We Live Again," an adaptation of Tolstoy's "Resurrection," starring Anna May Wong and Francis Markham, will be a part of the program, and we trust and hope that the radio story will do the better job than they did last week on "Transatlantic Merry-go-round." Markham's orchestra will provide the musical background.

Helen J. Mason, Metropolitan Police reporter, will be on the air with "Tuddy Bargman" will have leading

Mrs. Abraham E. Pincus, wife of Judge Pincus, made the report. She heads the women's wing in the drive. The campaign is now in its second week and the total so far is $21,964.

Given in Marriage

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge makes plan at the Minister's house.

"THEN WED better not spend any more time looking for the truck," Dicky said sensibly when I said that the marks of the truck, showing that Nola's car had turned toward Bridgehampton, meant that he and Mary planned to awaken the Reverend Mr. Winter, the man who had been asked to perform the marriage ceremony over them at the pretty home wedding we had planned.

"It's up to us to beat it to that minister's home," he went on, as I shifted gears and sped my pace. "How long a start have they had?"

"I don't know," I returned. "They were busy misunderstanding each other when I left the room with Aris Arlen. They had to get their differences cleared up, above the car out and put in their baggage. It's been less than half an hour."

"Let's hope the Reverend Mr. Winter is deaf, and wear the old-fashioned night shirt," Dicky commented. "Those two items will delay him. That's right, old dear, step on it!"

A RACE WON

And "step on it" I did, to such purpose that we drew up in front of the home of the Reverend Mr. Winter almost abreast of the car which held Nola and Mary. Dicky took a flying leap from the car and, reaching the gate set in a hedge of lilacs just as Mary and Nola rushed in, caught each of them in the powerful grip of an amateur boxer who is still a tradition at Nola's.

"Just a minute, youngsters," he said kindly. "We're not going to spoil this party if you still are it's the thing you want to do, after you've talked with the wise lady here. But a few minutes more or less aren't going to mess up things for you, and I give you my word nobody save us knows a thing about it. We won't get into our car with us, and listen to the wise lady for a few minutes? You can make up the preacher fifteen minutes from now just as effectively as by ringing his door bell now. Let the poor man have that much longer rest."

"It is not too nothing," that his intimates frequently have said that "the Dickybird" on whom any other bird or the bushes, if he only is permitted to talk long enough. And I never had heard him in better form than when he made his appeal to the two distracted people whose arms he was gripping. For "distracted" was the only word to apply to Mary and Nola, who were patently so astonished at our appearance that they at the moment they were robbed of volition in speech or action. But as Dicky began to walk toward the car, drawing them with him, Mary and he high leapt into the air and stopped so firmly that, without more force than Dicky wished to use, he could not budge her.

"Warn you it's no use, Uncle Dicky," she said. "We're terribly sorry and ashamed and all that, but our minds are made up. We simply can't stand that combination of cobra and champagne any longer."

MADGE MAKES PLAN

"Mary, darling!" I spoke softly from the car. "You don't have to stand her. That's what I have come to tell you. Please get into the car and give me a chance to tell you about it. I think you will see that much, don't you? I've tried so hard to help you."

It went sorely against the grain to make my voice so solemnly asaccharine as it sounded, and to remind her, as I was, of the dog, of the labor and time I had contributed toward the pretty home wedding which she was setting aside so casually.

"Oh, I know, Auntie Madge," Mary's voice was suddenly a concrete wall. "We're just beside to you, both of us, when you've been so wonderful to us."

Dicky stood back of them much. I told myself minutely, as might a deputy sheriff, while they dithered, suddenly into the car and settled themselves in the rear seat. Dicky climbed in there, too, and I turned around to see me that much, don't you? I've tried so hard to help you."

"I want you to know one thing, Mary," I said. "All my life I've been with you in this sudden rushing away tonight. I understand the impulse thoroughly and if I were not for the people who were to be married, I would be ringing that minister's door bell myself."

New Version of Two-Way Frock Is 'Fashion Find'

By MRS. BECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beckman:

I am an office girl, and since I have to work rather late, I find it difficult to entertain in the afternoon. But I am planning to have an afternoon tea in honor of two sisters who are leaving soon to live elsewhere.

Would it be 6 o'clock in a perfect time to have such an affair? Would it be proper to invite the mother of the guests of honor to the tea?

I, if you, should I ask her to "join"?

AN INTERESTED READER

Yes, four or five o'clock or four to seven o'clock are appropriate times for a tea.

Yes, by all means invite the mother of the guests of honor to your tea for her good advice. Your mother is to be present, it would be good of you to invite her mother, too.

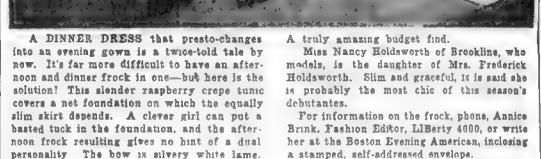

Yes, if you wish.

Seven-card suits are held very infrequently, eight-card suits even more so, and nine-card suits are rarely that they are practically unknown. A nine-card suit certainly cannot be criticized for indulging himself to the extent of bidding it a little unusually.

On the hand held the South player chose to pass for strategic reasons on the first two rounds of bidding, despite the fact that he knew at least a game could be made. He was rewarded by eventually being doubled at a vulnerable small slam contract and making an overtrick.

preempt and thus attempt to prevent the opponents from getting into the game. However, South decides that since he holds nine hearts instead of the usual seven or eight which are held on a preemptive bid, he can enter the bidding with out being seriously hurt even at the level of five-odd.

(2) South passes again—this time for purely strategic reasons. With South's void of spades and his hand of honor strength it is practically inconceivable that the bidding will die at one spade. South feels reasonably certain that he can make anywhere from four to seven hearts but decides to enter the bidding later in the hope that he will thus mislead the opponents and thereby stop them from taking a paying sacrifice.

South's hand looks like better now than North has bid his second doubleton and. South naturally cannot risk saying out of the bidding any further as "four spades" might easily be followed by three passes. Five hearts is really all that South can bid at this point as he is not sure of a heart fit in his partner's hand.

(4) North should have raised to six hearts despite South's two previous passes. He should have raised South's vulnerable five-heart bid as indicating that the latter must have a weak hand with a heart void, very long heart suit. However, North's failure to bid six hearts immediately over five was a contributing factor towards the opponents' success in doubling.

(5) Ordinarily the best procedure with a hand of this type is to

Coconut Will Glorify a Dessert

Cost Is About Eleven Cents

By THE BEAUTY EDITOR

HOW WOULD YOU LIKE to have a 20-minute facial and beauty sleep—all for the price of eleven cents?

French women, who are very wise in beauty lore and understand the importance of little things in both dress and make-up rely on the magical power of a quick complexion rejuvenator at the end of a difficult, tiring day.

If you want to put life into your face before a very special evening and you can neither afford the time nor the money for a salon treatment, by all means invest in a magical strawberry cream which has captured all the tonic benefits of fresh, ripe berries.

Strawberry masks and creams are something over which we have longed before, so we can only add that they are still our dream of the perfect thing for a magic pick-up.

Smooth a liberal quantity of this cream over your face and neck and almost at once your skin will appear clear, fresh and animated. It contracts the pores and brings a lively glow to the complexion. Lined, etched, fatigued and strain vanish. Unlike many facial masks, this cream does not dry or over-stimulate the skin. When it is wiped away your face will feel as cool as mountain snow.

Preserved in this unusual cream is the purest juice of crushed berries that have ripened under a scorching sun. If your skin needs bleaching as well as stimulating, use it often. Your face will reveal in the very hours of it.

There are eight treatments in a jar and at the cost of a little less than eleven cents a treatment, you can figure for yourself the approximate cost of the cream.

Afternoon Tea

By MRS. BECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beckman:

I am an office girl, and since I have to work rather late, I find it difficult to entertain in the afternoon. But I am planning to have an afternoon tea in honor of two sisters who are leaving soon to live elsewhere.

Would it be 6 o'clock in a perfect time to have such an affair? Would it be proper to invite the mother of the guests of honor to the tea?

I, if you, should I ask her to "join"?

AN INTERESTED READER

Yes, four or five o'clock or four to seven o'clock are appropriate times for a tea.

Yes, by all means invite the mother of the guests of honor to your tea for her good advice. Your mother is to be present, it would be good of you to invite her mother, too.

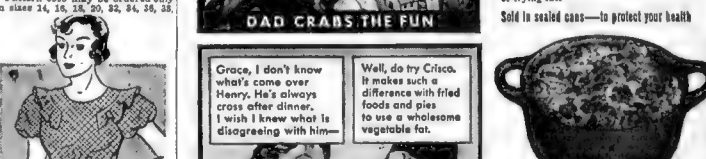

Yes, if you wish.

Seven-card suits are held very infrequently, eight-card suits even more so, and nine-card suits are rarely that they are practically unknown. A nine-card suit certainly cannot be criticized for indulging himself to the extent of bidding it a little unusually.

On the hand held the South player chose to pass for strategic reasons on the first two rounds of bidding, despite the fact that he knew at least a game could be made. He was rewarded by eventually being doubled at a vulnerable small slam contract and making an overtrick.

preempt and thus attempt to prevent the opponents from getting into the game. However, South decides that since he holds nine hearts instead of the usual seven or eight which are held on a preemptive bid, he can enter the bidding with out being seriously hurt even at the level of five-odd.

(2) South passes again—this time for purely strategic reasons. With South's void of spades and his hand of honor strength it is practically inconceivable that the bidding will die at one spade. South feels reasonably certain that he can make anywhere from four to seven hearts but decides to enter the bidding later in the hope that he will thus mislead the opponents and thereby stop them from taking a paying sacrifice.

South's hand looks like better now than North has bid his second doubleton and. South naturally cannot risk saying out of the bidding any further as "four spades" might easily be followed by three passes. Five hearts is really all that South can bid at this point as he is not sure of a heart fit in his partner's hand.

(4) North should have raised to six hearts despite South's two previous passes. He should have raised South's vulnerable five-heart bid as indicating that the latter must have a weak hand with a heart void, very long heart suit. However, North's failure to bid six hearts immediately over five was a contributing factor towards the opponents' success in doubling.

Peroxide Bleach for Superluous Hair

Question: Some time ago you gave a formula for the making of a bleach that would lighten the hair on the face. Would you mind repeating it for me? I find cotton kill the roots of the hair?

M. Y. Rosbury

Answer: The formula is composed of ammonia and peroxide. The proportions are one-half teaspoon ammonia, to three table-spoons peroxide. It should be mixed every day. Apply with a piece of absorbent cotton as often as convenient. If your skin is sensitive, apply a little glycerine.

enough fighting for one night. Can't you see?"

"I was tempted to paste the chair while his playmate had him tied up."

He laughed down at her, ducked his head to kiss her mouth, and grinned at me.

"There's always some other thing," he said good-naturedly.

"We'd better get out of here if we can't," I said.

"You've made too much money for it to be safe."

"Don't get it up in your face, little man," he told me. "I told you to get out of here if you can't."

The big tramp, if it hadn't been for Jack and me, he wouldn't have had any coal for the night.

We moved to the door, listened there, heard nothing.

"A stairs to the third floor must be up front," I whispered.

"We'll try them now."

"I've opened the door carefully. Enough light went past us into the hall to show a promise of emptiness. We crept down the hall, Red and I, each holding one of the girls' hands. I hoped they'd come out at night, but he had put out the light and I was afraid of my own shadow.

"I don't know that Larroux was large enough to have two miles of hallway. It did seem as even miles in the darkness to the head of the stairs we had come to. We didn't pause there to listen to the voices below. At the end of the next mile or two, we reached the bottom step of the staircase.

"Just then a well broke out at the head of the other flight."

"All up—there's up here!"

A white light beamed up from the stairs, and a voice called from below: "Come on down."

"Well, risk matches?"

"The police," Nancy began whistled, and we hustled up our new-found stairs to the third floor. More darkness, just like that we'd left. We stood still at the top of the stairs. We didn't seem to see any company.

"The roof," I said. "Well, risk matches?"

Back in a corner, our feeble match light found a ladder tied to the wall, leading to a trap in the ceiling.

The little later, as possible we went on Larroux's roof, the trap closed behind us.

"All right so far," said O'Leary. "We've made a couple of seconds long—long—long."

I led the way across the roof. We dropped ten feet to the next building, climbed a bit more, and found on the other side of it was a narrow crack with an opening into the back street.

"This ought to do it," I said, and went down.

The girl came behind me, and then Red. The court into which we dropped was empty—empty—empty. A row of cement pavement under the bottom of the trap, the concrete cracked as it hung down under my weight, but I didn't care. I didn't care anything. It was dark in the court, but not black.

"When we hit the street, we split," O'Leary told me, without a word of gratitude for my help. He didn't seem to know he had needed. "You tell your boss, we'll wait for you."

"I didn't," I said, chasing my brain around in a swirl. "I'll wait for the other."

Carefully I picked my way down to the end of the court and risked the top of my head as I went into the back street. It was quiet, but up at the corner, the boys were looking at me. Two officers were waiting coppers. I stepped out into the back street and beckoned them.

'VENUS' TO QUIT BURLESQUE FOR HOME MARY SUNDE IS HERE WITH HER ADORING MATE

He Engaged Her for Revealing Dance, Then Love Won

When Gerhardt Sunde produced the gay and glittering "Streets of Paris" at Chicago's Century of Progress, he sent for Mary Sunde, his wife and her dancing partner, after she had been a victim of indignation, had departed for Hollywood, and since the authentic atmosphere of the boulevard demanded fair and feminine charms, and plenty of them, Mary was summoned.

Now she is in Boston, headlining "The Streets of Paris" at the Theatre, and with her are her two new husbands, the most elaborate and stunning wardrobe in the city, and a playful little whirlwind for her partner, Fritz.

HE LOST HIS NERVE

Mrs. Sunde, however, was not so easily won. She had been a victim of indignation, had departed for Hollywood, and since the authentic atmosphere of the boulevard demanded fair and feminine charms, and plenty of them, Mary was summoned.

Under cross-examination, Mrs. Sunde testified that first heard there was any question concerning Robert's past, she was told by her attorneys for Palmer rested after taking five days for the preparation of his case.

Mobs Run Wild as World's Fair Closes

By International News Service

Chicago, Nov. 1.—The tumults of a Century of Progress stopped closing at 4 o'clock this morning after a riotous, boisterous closing day that saw 363,733 persons crowd into the exposition grounds in the final hours for a "last look" at the Fair.

Whooping, bursting bombs and revolvers marked the closing of the giant fair, a party the whooping.

Reverent hunters ransacked the place, tearing down street signs and in some cases, wrecking government property. Mobs of youths in the thousands of visitors ran berserk and war whoops and yells accompanied the mad rush for mementos.

In the streets of Paris, a fight started in one of the small cafes and spread with chairs, tables and bottles, hurtling through the air until a fire hose was turned on the rioters and quieted them.

The Colonial village was virtually wrecked by the mob seeking souvenirs.

Major Lenox Lohr, the fair's general manager, a limited damage done by the rioters at $100,000. That amount did not include the thousands of dollars worth of mementos "snatched" by the rioters.

In the $100,000,000 building, however, grabbed up by the rioters and left with $100,000,000 worth of mementos, $100,000 worth of mementos were stolen by women who entered for nothing more than a look at the fair.

At the Hall of the World's Fair, the rioters were seen to be in the hall, and the rioters were seen to be in the hall.

GERMANY PAYS LEGION TO NAME BRITISH DEBT

By Associated Press

London, Nov. 1.—Walter Runtz, president of the Board of Trade, today announced settlement of the Anglo-German commercial debts controversy by special cash payment of £100,000,000.

The Reichbank had agreed to pay interest on the £100,000,000 and to provide £100,000,000 sterling for settling in liquidating outstanding commercial debts in addition to the £100,000,000.

Germany guarantees to earmark 85 per cent of the value of German exports to Britain for payment of British exports to Germany. This allocation, Runtz said, according to the usual trend of Anglo-German trade, should be sufficient to enable British exports to be paid in full.

STOCK MARKET

EASY QUIET TRADING

New York, Nov. 1.—An easy tone developed in the stock market today, following initial steadiness. Volume increased slightly on the reaction.

Perick & Ford aped about a point, American Telephone and Consolidated Gas yielded around a point, while the lowliest of the market, Standard Oil of New Jersey, was off moderately. Borden was firm.

There had been hopes that the equities market would start November with some sort of an up-broke demonstration. Most traders, however, seemingly ignored a better brand of business, and other factors that, formerly, might have engendered enthusiasm. The Ford property, almost entirely, failed to spur the speculative appetite.

While Wall Street was inclined to view the President's new salary policy, the restoration of salary cuts and the probable expansion of the budget as inflationary, those who had their fingers burnt in the last year's speculative showed little disposition to stir up fresh fires.

In some quarters it was also pointed out that the administration, official and other, was, perhaps, being disappointed at the moment on the ground that there may have something to do with the election which will be next Tuesday.

Opinions as to the administration's price program were divided. Several observers recalled that, since last September, when the staples, as measured by the principal indexes of price questions, have been tending downward.

Banking circles expressed much interest in the administration's Secretary Morgenthau that, in the near future, might be the offering of 3,000,000 Home Owners Loan Bonds, instead of the $200,000,000, as had been expected. The question now arose whether the Treasury would repeat in connection with new Home Loan financing, in view of the smaller public participation.

It was thought that the Treasury, in the future, might stick to the open market.

Knobby Men, Lanky Gals C. F. Adams' Innocence: In 10-Gallon Hats Football Pool Grab: Take Over, Garden Manover to Move Out:

By AUSTEN LAKE

THE MURKY TUNNELS and underground caves at the Boston Garden are filled with men in tight pants and floppy hats who taster along on high heels. And there are women who wear dungarees of bright colors, mannish blouses and sweaters with a masculine air.

They are the hardy, pie-nick people, the cow ladies and gentlemen, who tonight begin a bawdier round of riding roughshod horses, wrestling the necks of adult heaves and scaring the wit out of little rodeo calves.

This is called the World Series rodeo. If you please, though the Boston rodeo is only one of five stops in the tour which includes New York, Indianapolis, Fort Worth and San Antonio, playing to a $50,000,000 gate and netting its paunchy, wrinkled proprietor, Colonel William T. Johnson, close to a million for the season.

COLONEL HILL IS ONE OF the quaint characters of the rodeo, a bluff, blustering little man with a corny, typical bump and a Bear Brummel of range fashions. He gives away between $5000 and $8000 annually to irresponsible cow hands.

An old rancher of the feudal West, now rising 55, he exploited the Eastern suburban curiosity about the policking, bull-fur-leather types of the cattle country. In return for his huge contracts with the New York and Boston Gardens he supplies 630 head of livestock, and wheedles 225 performers up from the range to risk life and limb for his cash prizes.

UNWILLING TO LET THE dead past bury its dead news stories, a New York yarn spinner has circulated the report that C. F. Adams, Bruins' angel and still a silent partner in the Braves, is father to the Ruth-for-Braves movement. With much verve and color, he tells how Adams is worried about the Red Sox snatching away public sentiment from his enterprise, etc.

That is not so, because Adams last spring Adams has withdrawn his active interest in the Braves and has ceded its administration completely to Judge Fuchs. Whatever caritative whisperers may say, the relations of the two are perfectly happy.

Fuchs says entire basis for the Ruth story came from an unauthorized visit of a non-stock holding acquaintance to Colonel Jake Rupert last summer. He chatted at random on the subject while the Colonel, who is a veteran silent-listener, twirled his thumbs.

First hint to Fuchs of this conference was when the self-appointed emissary related his adventure. Fuchs said "Uh-huh," and forgot about it until suddenly he heard the story spouting fireworks around his head like a July 4 set piece.

POSING AS SOMETHING OF a customer's man, I am telling the football pool buyers that the illicit business is apt to leave them holding the bag in Boston as it has over the week-end in New York.

Subscribers to this gambling racket, who pay varying amounts in the hope of returns of from 8 to 1 to 15 to 1 for picking a certain number of winners from a printed list of college games, found the proprietors had slipped with the pool money.

The same thing happened in Boston last year, where on the final Saturday of the 1933 football season, pool winners sought their dividends in vain. Both dividends and operators had evaporated.

As a racket, it is a sure thing for the operator. If his luck is good, he makes money on the failure of the subscribers to guess right. If he loses, he can make up the deficit and something more by pocketing the last purse and lamming South.

BY SATURDAY MORNING THERE will be little life in Kanover's Main street, where usually the sidewalks are teeming with corduroyed, macawed Dartmouth student.

By tomorrow evening the all-night artists; the mischievous, beer-swallowing stowaways who follow their team while hiding in the baggage car, and the volunteer alumni who sometimes give hotel keepers the horrors, will have left for New Haven.

Word at Hanover, where Dartmouth has not been defeated or scored upon in five games, is that "This is our year." They mean, this is the season to shatter the Yale Bowl jinx.

As the Parade's crystal gazing seeresses, who see all, knows all, told me this morning over our beer and sandwiches in her back-curtained parlor, that Dartmouth's polar star was in the correct quarter.

BILL TERRY, GIANTS MANAGER, has the memory of an elephant for an old veteran, financier or otherwise.

All the way from New Orleans he gives out an interview blaming the newsmen for most of his troubles, and citing the incident of the Boston girl reporter who refused to take "No" for an answer in the lobby of the Colony Hotel.

The sub-story wanted to do a personality feature on Bill and Terry would not hold still. As a final result, being charged with bringing back the story, the girl stood close to Bill while a photographer sneaked a quick shot of the couple.

The incident was a source of much hilarity among the Giants players and a giggling topic in the press box.

Four Sophomores Likely to Start for Crimson

Princeton's Eastern championship Tigers, undefeated over a stretch of 13 games since the start of the 1933 season, will provide the lure, the color, and the "ownership" next Saturday, which will mark Harvard's classical Stadium for the first time this season.

Yale game of 1934, to the stadium's capacity of 25,000, was completely exhausted. Saturday Harvard and Princeton will be playing their first game since 1928—when they met at the same place, but the Harvard Athletic Association, in the person of Treasurer Carroll Gentry, is not at all sure that the application of the school's athletic association will be approved by the Board of Trustees.

With two and a half days to go, the Harvard Crimson-Tigers game, scheduled for Saturday, October 27, is still a long way from being a sure thing. The Harvard Athletic Association, in the person of Treasurer Carroll Gentry, is not at all sure that the application of the school's athletic association will be approved by the Board of Trustees.

ARNOLD EAGER TO SHIP V.I. WIN STRING

Speculators at Huntington field, Brookline, Saturday, will see a real fight when the Arnold College Terrers face the Northeastern U. Huskies.

The New Haven eleven would like nothing better than to break the winning streak of the undefeated N. U. club.

McCoy's outfit is straining at the leash to even scores for last year's losing, when the Arnold gradates won out in the final minutes, 1912.

Cochran Al McCoy has warned all holders to keep a special eye on Johnny Janenda, chief Terrer.

It was Mr. Janenda, Arnold's quarterback, who raised havoc with the Huntington avenger gradates last year, but this year the New Haven will find a team had per cent stronger than the eleven they met last fall.

With Ray Pelletier, star halfback, and the Smith powerful pivot, definitely out of action, Alan Harkness and Hank Abruzzese will start in their place. Both relief men started against Lowell Textile last year.

The victors were paired with Chelsea, Haverhill, Revere and Naushon.

Bayworld had been out of school for two years prior to his return in September, and a pupil is not supposed to play until he has been back at school three months.

After trailing 35 to 10, Alan Callan, who is still on the job at New Haven, scored the 1922 touch-down in the memory of the Ellis their initial victory of the season.

Callan's touchdown was a long one, going into the Bowl last year, but his record had been marred by his previous work by 34 to 13 with Harvard.

Although Yale scored first, Dartmouth was leading late in the game 13 to 7, Michael Vergez, Dartmouth's goal was converted into a touchdown, doing the business.

Al Masters, who started to go places and when the Dartmouth alumni and graduates filled out of the Bowl, their spirits were at low ebb for Yale had taken out 34 to 13 victory.

Black has purposely avoided any mention of Yale at all. Although he is somewhat disgraced on this subject, we suspect that "Red" has seen a ray of hope, which may break the Yale hoodoo.

In that last year's freshman team which had first aggregation of Dartmouth football players that ever turned a Yale team back on the gridiron. At least, the sophomore, the game was a success.

Dartmouth Grid Teams Have 'Blown' Four of Last Nine Games in Yale Bowl

By Bill Grimes

In all sections of the country Dartmouth alumni are sending up prayers that Head Coach Earl 'Red' Blinn will send that Yale team, not only out of the Bowl but completely out of the old Dartmouth stadium.

The Green and the Blue will meet in the middle of the Dartmouth re-union games, which are now being held in the Yale Bowl.
